

UNIVERSITY OF
ST. THOMAS

Integrated Learning - Learning for Life

IHUM 2301 / MLMLA 5301

“Integrated Learning” is a required course for the B.A. or B.S. in Integrated Humanities, and an elective for the Masters in Liberal Arts (MLA).

It is intended on the one hand to orient students to the interrelationship of the various branches of human inquiry and on the other to explore the theory and techniques of multidisciplinary liberal learning.

This course is great for all students, regardless of major, and is offered 100% online!

Students in “Integrated Learning” will gain fundamental skills in analytical reading of texts, across disciplinary fields, in analyzing and articulating evidence and arguments in oral and written forms, and in identifying the philosophical content of readings, namely the metaphysical, anthropological, and ethical assumptions therein, all aimed ultimately at answering the questions: what does a text say, how does it say it, and what difference does it make.

For more information, contact Thomas C. Behr, J.D., Ph.D.
Director of Graduate & Undergraduate Liberal Arts Programs, Assistant Professor of History at 713-525-6951 or behrt@stthom.edu