Find “The Outlook” column in the Wall Street Journal using Doherty library’s online databases

2. Select the library Databases option.
3. Scroll down to choose the Wall Street Journal from the alphabetical list. [Note: If you are accessing our website from off-campus you will be prompted to enter your UST email username and password before entering the database.]

About The Outlook:

The Outlook is published every Monday (except holidays). It appears in the Economy section and is always on Page A-2.

Finding The Outlook column:

1. Select the green search button in the upper left side of the screen.
2. Advanced search mode allows you to search the column title field. Enter the words “the outlook” – in quotes, exactly as shown – in the first dialog box and then use the adjacent drop down menu to select column. Like this:

!Advanced Search
You can also limit to a date range before clicking Search.

Date range: Last 30 days

Now you’re ready to hit Search.

Nearly all your results should be The Outlook column. Remember you can verify by checking that the article is on pg. A-2 and that column name says “The Outlook,” like this one: